LOOKING TO REPEAT

Stanford will use a mix of veterans and talented newcomers to defend its NCAA Title in 2007-08.

The Stanford men's golf team begins 2007-08 in the best possible position. Not only is the Cardinal coming off of a decisive 12-stroke victory at the NCAA Championships, but, going into the season, the team is ranked No. 1. The squad has three returning All-Americans and has added four talented newcomers, including two from among the top handful in the nation. Head Coach Conrad Ray is the reigning Conference, Regional and National Coach of the Year, and three of his players are among 2007-08's Top-50 Players to Watch. With all of the tools they need to succeed, Ray and his squad are ready to make a run at another title.

Ray begins his fourth season at the helm of the program, having brought it incredible success. In his first year as a head coach, he led the team to its first NCAA Championship appearance since 2001, and by last season, he had joined the elite group of NCAA head coaches to have won a national title as both an athlete and coach. This season, Ray aims to continue to build on that success and bring home Stanford's first repeat national title since 1942.

Senior Rob Grube will be the team's anchor in 2007-08, as the only senior on the Cardinal roster. Grube, one of the most successful golfers in Stanford history, finished third at the NCAA Championships last year and earned the third All-America honor of his career. He led the team with a 71.1 stroke average over 13 events, a mark that ranked third all-time in the Cardinal record books. Grube posted ten top-25 finishes, six of which were top-ten, and won two tournaments. As a senior this season, Grube has a chance to become Stanford's second four-time All-American, a feat only PGA professional Joel Kribel has accomplished.

"Rob Grube is the hardest worker I have ever met," says Ray. "He will be a leader for us this year on and off the course and I know he still has many things he wants to accomplish in the game and for his team. I look for big things from Rob this season."

Stanford's other two returning All-Americans, junior Daniel Lim and sophomore Joseph Bramlett, were both members of last year's fivesome that won the NCAA title. Along with Grube, the pair knows what it takes to make it to the top, and will undoubtedly be valuable assets to the 2007-08 team.

"The experience that the team garners with every trip to the NCAA is irreplaceable," says Ray. "These guys want to make it back, so our challenge will be to concentrate on the little things that add up to the bigger goal."

Lim played in ten tournaments for the Cardinal last season, and recorded seven top-25 finishes. An Honorable Mention All-Pac-10 selection, Lim notched his best performance of the year at the U.S. Intercollegiate in April, finishing third at the team's home tournament with 4-under, 206. The junior, who finished the season with a 72.4 stroke average, went on to tie for 15th in his first appearance at the NCAA Championships with three under-par rounds. In 2007-08, the Cupertino, Calif. native will bring key experience to the Cardinal roster.

"Daniel Lim epitomizes the grit and tenacity that our team needs to have for success this season," says Ray. "He has worked hard on his fitness and technique in the off season and should play a big role on this team."

Bramlett was one of the nation's most outstanding rookies last year, getting a fast start to his collegiate career. The local product tied for 11th in his first collegiate tournament, and proceeded to earn top-25 finishes in all five fall events. By February, he had won his first tournament, the Puerto Rico Classic, and by late May, he had 10 top-25 finishes, three top-10 finishes and the lowest freshman stroke average since Tiger Woods. Bramlett competed at the NCAA Championships and helped the team to the title, finishing the season with a 71.5 stroke average and 18 under-par rounds. Bramlett was named to the elite GCAA All-Freshman Team following his inaugural campaign. This season, Bramlett looks to build on his early success and carry the team to another NCAA title.

"Any coach would love to have five Joseph Bramlett's on their team," says Ray "Joe has a knack for getting the ball into the hole and shooting the lowest score he can that given day. He has all of the physical and mental tools to be one of our best."

Two more Stanford veterans will further bolster the 2007-08 roster. Junior Dodge Kemmer was an All-Conference selection in 2006, and competed in 16 events in his first two years on the Farm. He recorded a pair of top-25 finishes last season and finished the year with a 73.2 stroke average. Sophomore Jordan Cox recorded two top-15 finishes in his first three collegiate events, and gained valuable experience as a member of the squad's fivesome at the Pac-10 Championships.

"Dodge and Jordan will see much more playing time this year," says Ray "Both have great work ethic and the ability to go low: two keys to success in college golf."

In addition the solid base of returnees, however, Ray has nabbed one of the best recruiting classes in the nation. The class is headlined by Sihwan Kim (Buena Park, Calif.), Stanford's first U.S. Junior Champion since Tiger Woods. Considered one of the top-10 recruits in his class, Kim was also listed among the Top-50 Players to Watch in Golf World's College Preview. In his collegiate debut at the Topy Cup in September, Kim immediately rose to the top and led the team with a third place finish. Another newcomer, Steve Ziegler (Broomfield, Colo.), is also considered one of the nation's top-15 recruits after winning two Colorado State Championships. The class is rounded out by a pair of promising young golfers, Matt Kennerknecht (Vienna, Va.) and Graham Brockington (Laguna Niguel, Calif.).

"I love our freshman class!" says Ray. "Every guy brings a different personality and qualities that can help the team. They are excited to make their mark and take on all of the challenges that Stanford and high level college golf provide."

Ray has lined up a competitive schedule for his team in 2007-08, beginning with the team's early start at the Topy Cup in Japan.

"We will compete against many of the top ranked teams in the country this season," he says. "This exposure will help us prepare for the NCAA Tournament in June which is our ultimate goal."

The remaining schedule will be highlighted by the Isleworth Collegiate Invitational in Windermere, Florida (Oct. 21-23) and the U.S. Collegiate Championship in Alpharetta, Ga. (Mar. 24-26) where Stanford will meet some of the other top-tier programs. Stanford will host the annual U.S. Intercollegiate Apr. 19-20, which features eight of the ten Pac-10 squads. The Pac-10 Championships will be local this year, hosted by Cal at The Meadow Club in San Rafael, Apr. 28-30, while the NCAA Championship is set for May 30-Jun. 2 in Lafayette, Ind.

while the NCAA Championship is set for May 30-Jun. 2 in Lafayette, Ind.

"With this team we will have a great chance to have another rewarding season," notes Ray. "This will only come with hard work and determination, but I firmly believe this group of guys is up for the challenge. Good college golf is just as much about your fifth man as it is your number one and this year's team will be one of the deepest we have ever had. The outlook is very bright."

All-American senior Rob Grube finished third at the NCAA Championships last year.

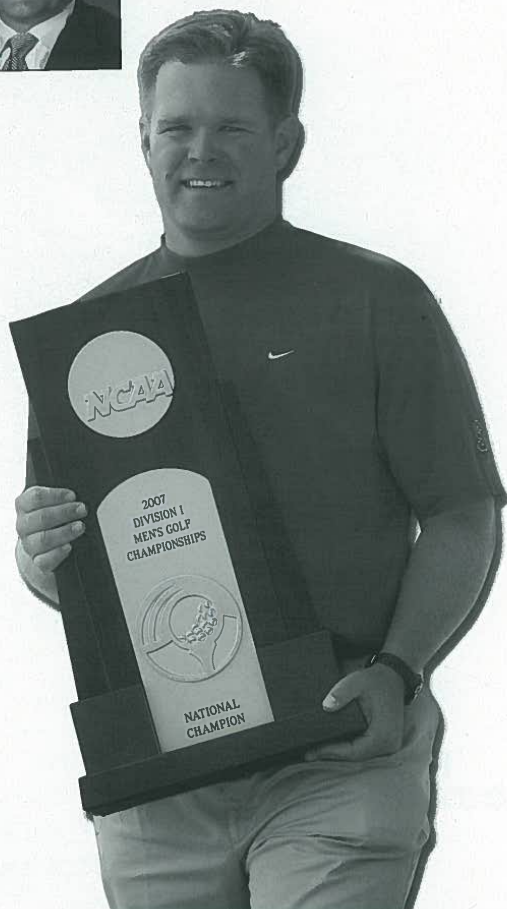

HEAD COACH CONRAD RAY

The Knowles Family Director of Men's Golf

Conrad Ray, a former Cardinal golfer and touring golf professional, begins his fourth season as Head Coach of the Stanford men's golf program.

Last season, Ray helmed one of the most successful Stanford teams in history, guiding the Cardinal to its first national title since 1994. Ray, a member of that 1994 squad, is one of the elite few NCAA head coaches to have won an NCAA title as both an athlete and coach. Under Ray's guidance, the Cardinal led wire-to-wire at the 2007 NCAA Championships in Williamsburg, Va. and claimed an eighth national title for the program. The 12-stroke victory capped an impressive season, during which the squad won seven tournaments and earned a No. 1 national ranking. All five Stanford golfers were named All-Americans at the conclusion of the season, the most to earn the honor in a single-season in program history. Additionally, the squad produced an Academic All-American, three Pac-10 All-Academic honorees, five All-Conference selections, five All-Region selections and a GCAA All-Freshman selection. Ray was named the 2007 Pac-10 Coach of the Year, the Pacific Regional Coach of the Year and the Dave Williams/Eaton Golfpride National Coach of the Year following the 2007 campaign.

In 2005-06, Ray's second year at the helm of the program, the Cardinal posted ten top-10 finishes and advanced to the NCAA West Regional in Tucson, Ariz. Sophomore Rob Grube was tabbed Pac-10 Co-Player of the Year and was honored as an All-American for the second time in his career.

In his first season on the Farm, Ray led his squad its first NCAA Championship appearance since 2001. Under Ray's leadership, Stanford tied for 18th overall while freshman Rob Grube tied for fifth individually, becoming the first Stanford golfer to record a top-five finish since 1998.

"Conrad is a great fit for Stanford and brings a wealth of knowledge of the game from his professional experience," said Stanford Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby. "As a former student-athlete and member of the 1994 NCAA Championship team, he understands what it takes to succeed here at Stanford University."

"I am very excited to be back at Stanford and be a part of a program and university that I hold in high esteem," said Ray. "I look forward to continuing the winning tradition and meeting the future challenges of the Stanford golf program. My experience here on The Farm was one that I cherish and I look forward to affording new student-athletes the same great experience."

Ray is a 1997 graduate of Stanford University where he earned a Bachelor's Degree in Public Policy.

A three-year letterwinner for the Cardinal golf team, Ray was a member of the 1994 NCAA Championship squad and a teammate of Tiger Woods, Casey Martin and Notah Begay. He captained the team in 1997 and was an All-Pac-10 and Pac-10 All-Academic selection that season as well. As a senior, he posted six top-10 finishes and nine under-par rounds. Ray's 73.95 stroke average was second-best on the squad.

Ray was tapped to play in the U.S. Open at Pinehurst in June 2005. He has played on the Nationwide Tour and other world tours since 1998 and achieved 12 top-10 finishes in that span. He has worked extensively with numerous golf instructors throughout the country and has organized and administered various pro-am and fund-raising golf tournaments, including the Karl Potach Memorial Tournament for children's cancer research and the Bart McCormick Classic. Ray has been a member of the Golf Coaches Association National Advisory Board since July 2006.

Ray is married to the former Jennifer Woods and has a one-year-old daughter, Ella Katherine Ray.

MIKE LOFBERG

Golf Operations Associate

Mike Lofberg begins his fifth year as the Golf Operations Associate for the Stanford women's and men's golf teams.

Lofberg spent four years in the Stanford Athletic Development department before moving over to the golf programs. He now oversees four collegiate golf tournaments and all fundraisers for both programs. Lofberg graduated from Villanova in 1999. He and wife, Lisa, have a son, Matthew, and a daughter, Elizabeth, and currently reside in San Francisco.

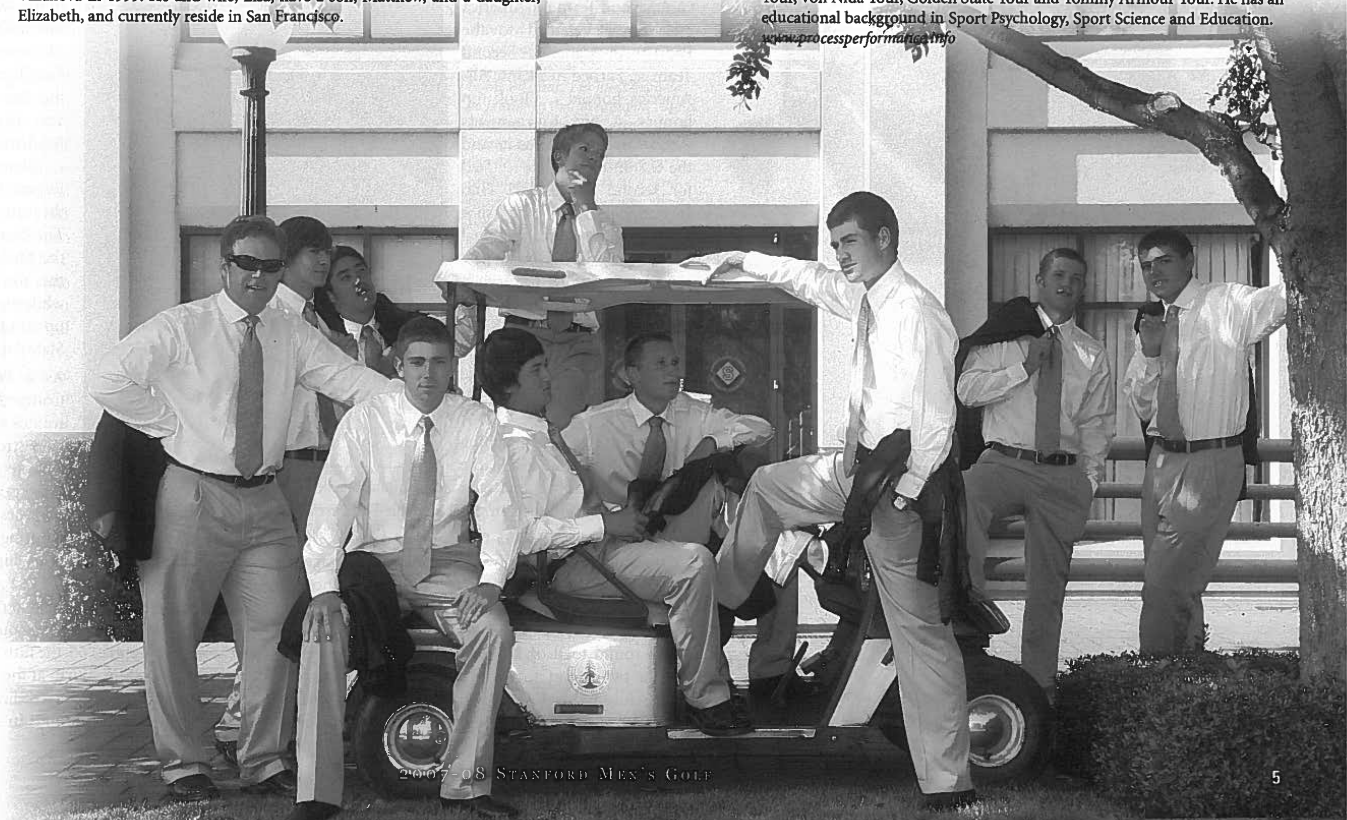

NEALE SMITH

"It was the proudest moment in my athletic life. It was the realization of three years of dedication. Athletically, I know few moments in my life will be more satisfying."
-Rob Grube

"It was exhilarating to see that all of our hard efforts throughout the year were rewarded with a National Championship. One of my favorite memories was seeing the leader board with four holes to play and Stanford had pulled completely away from the field. The last four holes of my college career were stress free with a National Championship awaiting."
-Zack Miller

"Winning the National Championship is really tough to put into words. This was our goal at the beginning of the season and each one of the guys dedicated himself to achieving it. Standing on the 18th green after we had won was one of the most surreal feelings. To realize that all of the practices, workouts, travel, not only for the year, but the past four years had finally paid off was an indescribable feeling. After the team's struggles my first three years, to end my Stanford golf career in this way was a dream come true."
-Matt Savage

"Winning a National Championship was the greatest golf memory that I have had in my entire career. It was an unbelievable experience being part of a season-long team effort and coming together with my seven other teammates to produce a National Championship. It was the most powerful thing that I have ever been a part of."
-Joseph Bramlett

"I believe at times we defined what it meant to be together as a team and winning the championship made the hard work that we as a team put together all the more special. I remember most the chit chat with my teammates after knowing that we won the championship."
-Daniel Lim

“I had such a great time playing golf at Stanford. Just all the practicing, playing and qualifying. It was always competitive and a bunch of fun being around each other.

What sets Stanford apart is the combination of quality athletics with an unmatched educational experience. Our Provost was Condeleeza Rice. My economics teacher was one of President Clinton’s advisors. You don’t see that at most schools.

It was so intellectually stimulating to be challenged all the time. There was no way I could compete against some of those people. They were so smart. One kid had a photographic memory, and another built a computer from scratch.

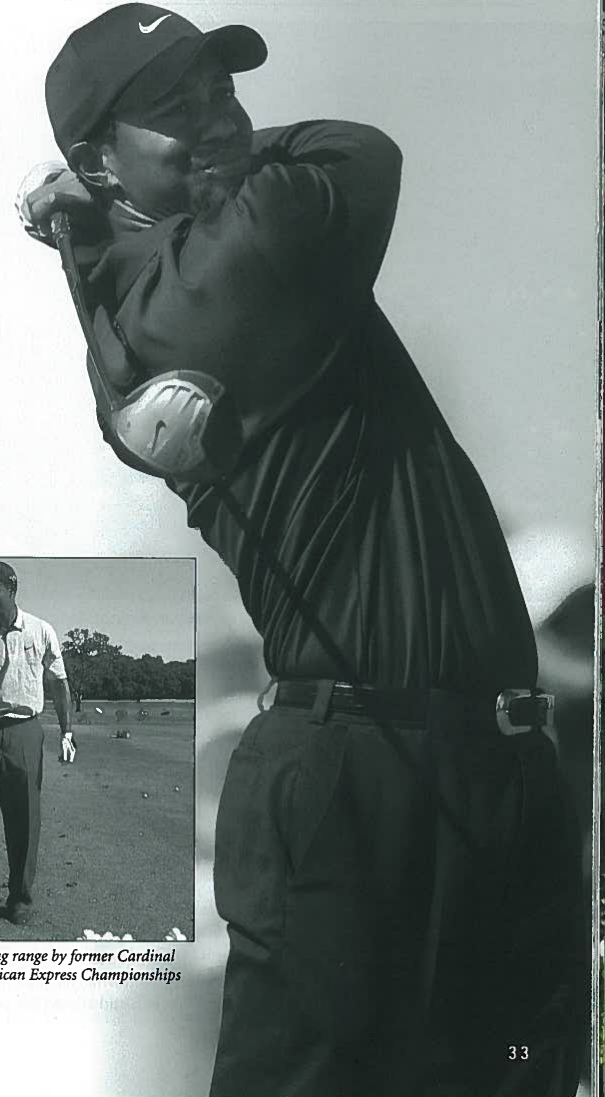

Playing golf at Stanford prepared me in understanding time management skills. To make it through there, you have to manage your time. It’s one of the great things I learned.

I really enjoyed being stimulated by the students and professors. Some were geniuses and other were Olympic athletes. It’s amazing how well-rounded they are. That’s what’s so cool about it. You just soak up that experience. It was one of the best times of my life.”

The Stanford golf team was surprised at the driving range by former Cardinal golfer Tiger Woods, who was in town for the American Express Championships in Harding Park.

STANFORD GOLF COURSE

The Stanford Golf Course is among the finest private courses in the nation, with a spectacular view from the 18th tee which looks out toward the San Francisco skyline.

by Gordon I. Ratliff

The Stanford University Golf Course was designed in 1930 by renowned golf course architects William Bell and George C. Thomas, Jr. Located in the foothills above the Stanford University Campus, the golf course is consistently rated one of the finest courses in the world. In 1998, the golf course was rated 91st in the country by Golf Week Magazine and in 1993 was rated 88th in the world by Golf Magazine.

In the 1920s, Stanford students lobbied for a golf course. The golf team was using the Burlingame Course for practice and was coached by the Burlingame pro Harold Sampson. Luckily, the students found an enthusiast in Almon E. Roth '09, the University Controller, who had become hooked on the game and was a member of the Los Altos Country Club. In February 1929, he persuaded the Stanford University Board of Trustees to provide the land and finance the construction of a golf course at the University. Then he and Al Masters, the manger of the Athletic Department, hired George C. Thomas Jr. and William "Billy" Bell to design and build the course.

Roth had his own ideas as to the layout of the course, and when Bell arrived in March they walked the area. Bell immediately saw the possibility of incorporating San Fancisquito Creek into the design. Aquiring the land on the other side of the creek, which belonged to the Buck Estate, required a change in the California State Constitution to allow a land swap. Roth flew to Sacramento from the Palo Alto Airport in an open cockpit biplane to lobby for the change.

Thomas designed the course and Bell managed the construction. Bell traveled back and forth to Beverly Hills updating Thomas on his progress and getting further instructions. Thomas was ill and died a couple of years later having never seen the results of his effort.

Construction began in May of 1929, with great care being taken to preserve the oak trees. Ultimately, only 75 had to be removed. At that time, water for the irrigation of the campus came from Searsville Lake. Since a much great quantity of water would be required for the golf course, Felt Lake was enlarged to a capacity of 278,000,000 gallons. By December the course was ready. "Dick" Templeton, the track coach who first used starting blocks in track meets, was in the first foursome on opening day, January 1, 1930.

The course cost $188,000 to design and build, and enlarging Felt Lake cost $190,000. The club house, which cost $54,000, was designed by the architects Bakewell and Brown, who had designed many buildings on campus, and were noted for desiging City Hall in San Fancisco. Club member Wells P. Goodenough was the contractor.

One unique feature of the course was Bell's bunker design, which included natural and undefined edges. The 12th hole is one of the most difficult in Northern California, having four trees down the middle of the fairway. The 18th tee is probably the most picturesque because of the spectacular view of San Francisco and almost the entire Bay Area.

Billy Bell, George C. Thomas and Alistair McKenzie designed and oversaw the building of the Stanford Golf Course in 1929.

Stanford University Golf Course is steeped in tradition. Throughout the years, Stanford has hosted many intercollegiate and non-collegiate events, including the Stanford Invitational, Pac-10 Championships, NCAA Western Regional, Women's NCAA Championships, USGA Junior Amateur Qualifying, U.S. Open Qualifying and a former Senior PGA Tour event, The Gathering at The Farm.

Stanford University Golf Course, which is currently ranked as the sixth best University Course by Golfweek Magazine, has also produced many influential golfers throughout the years.

Such notables include former USGA presidents Sandy Tatum and Grant Spaeth, and PGA Tour professionals Tom Watson, Tiger Woods and Notah Begay III.

Did You Know??

Stanford hosted the first annual NCAA Women's Golf Championships in 1982. Nineteen five-woman teams and 17 individuals – for a total of 112 players – entered the competition on the par-73, 5,903-yard course.

Stanford/Pepsi Women's Intercollegiate

The 2007 tournament marks the 42nd year the Women's Fall Intercollegiate has been a part of the Stanford Golf Course tradition. The Cardinal has taken home the top prize in its own event four times: 1982, 1984, 1985 and 1997. Stanford's individual medalists include Joanne Pacillo in 1982, Kathy McCarthy in 1984, Julie Carmichael in 1985, Mhairi McKay tied for first place in 1995 and Hilary Homeyer in 1997.

Peg Barnard California Collegiate

This tournament began as the California Collegiate, but was renamed in honor of one of Stanford's strongest supporters, Peg Barnard. One of the most important legacies left behind by Barnard is the Buck/Cardinal Club, which she founded in 1978 and presided over in its initial few years. The Cardinal Club raised more than five millions dollars in its first decade. In recognition of her support, the University named the women's annual spring intercollegiate championships the Peg Barnard California Collegiate in 1997.

U.S. Intercollegiate

The Cardinal men have won this event 12 times since 1968, including a string of six in a row from 1970-1975. Ten individual titles have been won by eight golfers. They are Sandy Aldeman in 1968, Gary Vanier in '70, Tom Watson in '71, Mike Peck in '76, Mike Milliken in '90, Casey Martin in '95, Joel Kribel in '96 and '97 and Rob Grube in '06 and '07.

The Prestige at PGA West

Played at the Greg Norman Course, The Prestige consists of sixteen universities from across the United States who are dedicated to academic and athletic excellence. Stanford and the University of California, Davis co-host the event. Stanford claimed the title at the The Prestige in La Quinta, Calif. last year with a total of 849. Senior Zack Miller earned top medalist honors with a 54-hole total of 207. www.prestige-pgawest.com.

Stanford students come from all over the world, including all 50 states and 68 countries.

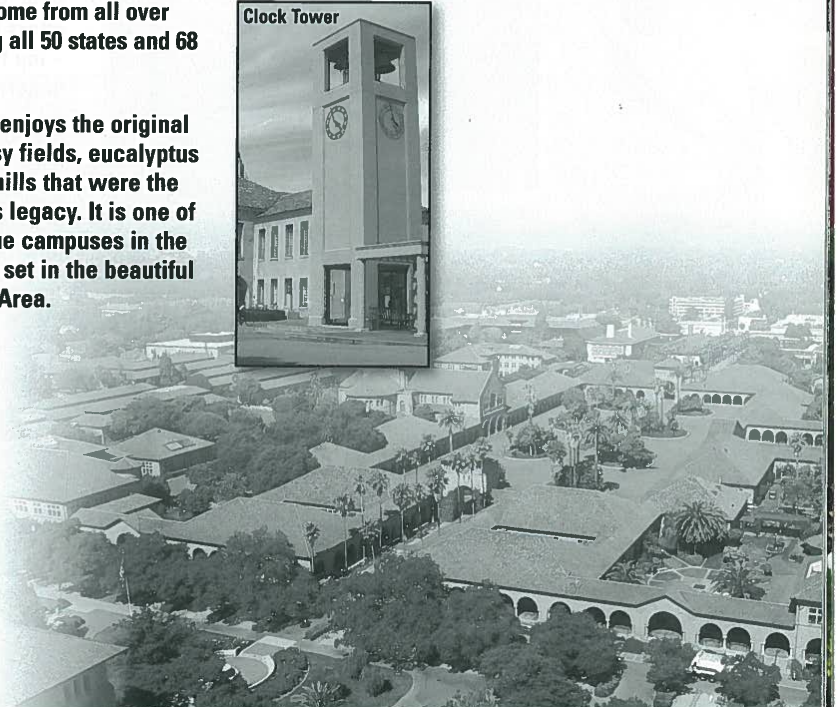

The University still enjoys the original 8,180 acres of grassy fields, eucalyptus groves and rolling hills that were the Stanford's generous legacy. It is one of the most picturesque campuses in the nation, comfortably set in the beautiful San Francisco Bay Area.

Clock Tower

Stanford University is recognized as one of the world's great universities.

Stanford's faculty is one of the most distinguished in the nation, including 18 Nobel Laureates and four Pulitzer Prize winners. There are over eight million volumes in Stanford's nearly two dozen libraries.

STANFORD STUDENTS

Student-athletes at Stanford have accepted the challenge of pursuing excellence both in the classroom and on the playing field. It is often said that Stanford offers the best of both worlds – top flight academics and unparalleled athletics.

Stanford's 6619 undergraduates and 8192 graduate students are distinguished by their initiative, love of learning and commitment to the larger world. Independent thinkers and relentlessly curious, students at Stanford bring passion and imagination to everything they do.

Stanford students work hard, and they play with equal energy and enthusiasm. From public service to performing arts, from intramural sports to student government, undergraduates take part in numerous activities beyond the classroom.

HOME OF CHAMPIONS

Stanford Athletics is one of the most respected and admired collegiate athletic programs in the nation. During each of the past 13 years, Stanford has won the prestigious Directors' Cup awarded to the most outstanding collegiate athletic program in the nation. Stanford has also won at least one national title in each of the past 31 years, most recently with the country's best teams in women's cross country, men's golf and synchronized swimming in 2006-07.

INTERNATIONAL COMPETITION

Many Stanford student-athletes continue their success in international competition with numerous Olympic and World champions. Many current and former Stanford student-athletes and coaches participate in the Olympics in a variety of sports. Stanford was represented by 43 affiliates at the most recent Olympic Games that took place in 2004 in Athens, Greece. The Cardinal totaled 17 medals — three gold, seven silver and seven bronze.

Stanford Academics: Second to None

ACADEMIC SUPPORT

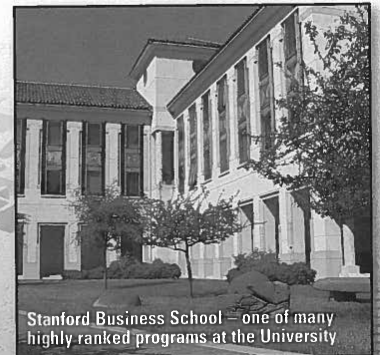

Stanford student-athletes match their collegiate playing career with a prestigious Stanford education. Stanford University is consistently ranked as one of the best overall colleges in the nation. According to a 2007 U.S. News and World Report, Stanford ranked as follows nationally:

- No. 4-T University
- No. 2 School of Education
- No. 2 Graduate School of Business
- No. 2 Engineering Program
- No. 2-T Law School

Black Enterprise ranked Stanford as the No. 7 University for African-American students in 2006.

Everyone at Stanford is committed to the full experience of a student-athlete. Each player has access to the Athletic Academic Resource Center (AARC). In the AARC, finding the balance between academics and athletics is key. Counselors and tutors work with student-athletes to make their academic lives as smooth as possible.

Stanford players earn meaningful degrees most often in four years. Athletes are also eligible to apply for a fifth year of study in order to pursue a Masters degree in many departments.
