

Bud Brownell

Warren Berl

Just about the finest of many fine golf teams, the Stanford players marched through all Coast competition with a minimum of effort. The team of Bud Brownell, Warren Berl, Bud Finger, Sandy Tatum, Gordon Hough, and Dee Replogle won the Pacific Coast team championship on the local links by a margin of over 40 strokes. All six qualified for the individual championship match play, and in the final round Brownell won the crown from Replogle in a sensational match. Another accomplishment of the golfers was a satisfying $23\frac{1}{2}$ to $31\frac{1}{2}$ team victory over California's clubmen. The Cards shut out the Bears in the morning play, and continued their predominance in the afternoon rounds.

FRESHMAN GOLF

From the ranks of the frosh linkmen come the iron and wood experts who will take the place of the varsity stars in the years to come, and from the performances turned in by this crop of yearling golfers Eddie Twiggs won't have much worrying to do for some time to come. Such promising frosh as George Traphagen, Jack Wilson, Frank McCann, Loren LaPrade and Jim LaGasa will soon be ready to follow the fine tradition set by Stanford golfers in the past. The most impressive team victory turned in by the frosh was that over the California yearlings, a 27-0 blanking. Eddie Twiggs gave almost every man on the team a chance to play against the Cubs, and the Papoose squad still took every match. Probably the strongest team the frosh met was the San Francisco Junior College squad, whom they defeated 24-3.
